The young King Henry was very clever and had lots of talents. He enjoyed music, sports, hunting, games and, of course, eating and drinking! However, he also had a lot of official duties to perform like signing official documents, attending mass, meeting with his advisors and discussing affairs of state.

When Henry first became king, the people idolised him. He was very different to his father who had been very serious and was known to be careful with his money. But Henry was different. He loved having masked balls and jousting tournaments. He spoke several languages fluently. He also enjoyed composing music. Here are some of the lyrics to the songs Henry wrote:

Alas, what shall I do for love?
For love, alas, what shall I do?
Since now so kind
I do you find
To keep you me unto.
Alasse!

Oh my heart, and oh my heart,
My heart it is so sore.
Since I must from my love
depart,
And know no cause wherefore.

A typical day in Henry's life may have looked like this:
