

WALT: I can use apostrophes for possession. 1 star

Edit the sentences to include the apostrophe for possession in the correct place.

One evening Lila's grandfather told her a story about a man that he'd met once when he was a boy.

Then a breeze began to blow and the dust around Lila's feet started to dance.

The clouds grew darker and darker, filling with Lila's sadness...until the sky was ebony with emotion.

Lila joyfully lifted her hands to the crying sky, for each raindrop felt like one of her mama's kisses.

Challenge-can you write you own sentence for this part of the story using an apostrophe for possession?
