

Hello Lucky Pennies!

I hope you have had a lovely half term break and you are ready to try your hardest with all of the home learning activities I have planned for you. I know that some of you are starting to find working at home a bit trickier now. It is perfectly normal for you to find it hard at times. Everyone has found this lockdown hard at times ... me included! Some days are easier than others aren't they? We just all have to keep trying our best. Remember that your parents and carers are trying hard too and although it is their job to look after you, sometimes you need to look after them as well. Getting on with your home learning as independently as I know you can, really does help them out. Please upload whatever you want to share with me on ClassDojo. I love to see how you are getting on.

The Lost Happy Endings

The theme for this week is based on a short story called 'The Lost Happy Endings.' We will study the first few pages this week and move onto the following part of the book next week. Try to complete the reading activities first because they will help you to complete the writing and topic sessions.

Maths

There are options for maths this week.

1. Follow the link for White Rose Maths <https://whiterosemaths.com/homelearning/year-5/> and complete the worksheets shared on our class page on the website.
2. Complete activities 1-5 on 'Converting Units of Measure' from Oak National Academy <https://www.thenational.academy/online-classroom/year-5/maths#subjects>
3. Complete the activities created that link with our theme 'The Lost Happy Endings.' These activities recap skills you were taught at the start of the year.

You may want to do all of the maths activities and that is great! Please choose at least one option.

I have had an idea for another quiz so look out for that sometime this week too. Please do keep in touch in whatever way you can. I miss you all lots.

Love Miss Knox
