

Hello Lucky Pennies,

Recently, I have been reading one of my favourite books - The Boy, the mole, the fox and the horse by Charlie Mackesy - and it gave me an idea for this week's home learning. The theme this week is 'kindness.'

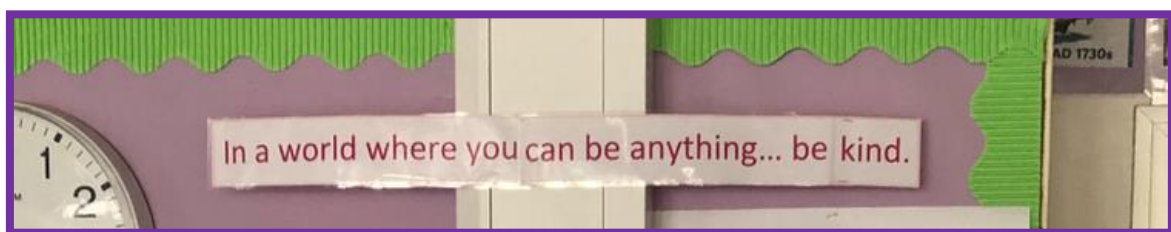

At the moment, we are all adjusting to a new way of living. Many adults are working from home and some are heading out to do essential work, helping to keep our county as safe as possible. Because of this, you are all having to work extra hard to complete your school work as well as learning how to be even more understanding, even more tolerant and even kinder than you have ever been before.

This week, the majority of your home learning activities are based around completing tasks about showing kindness. I am sure that you have done many things already to show your kindness to others and I would love to hear about them. Have you drawn a rainbow to show support for the NHS? Have you stood at your front door and clapped in appreciation of the key workers? Have you made your parents a cup of tea? Helped your siblings with their home learning? Phoned your friends to let them know you are thinking of them? How have you been showing kindness?

Week 7 Tasks

The reading material this week is an extract from Wonder by RJ Palacio. The writing and reading tasks that follow are based on this. All of these tasks can either be done on the worksheets or straight onto a piece of paper. Please do not feel you need to print off the extract, it can be read online. There are PSHE tasks all about kindness and I have also included some additional tasks too that you could try if you have time. The maths tasks this week can be found on the Oak National Academy website and can be done online. However, I have also included some additional practical maths tasks that you could try too.

This week, as we move into yet another week of lockdown, I would like us all to focus on a saying that has been displayed in our classroom since September 2019 ...

I cannot wait to see all of your acts of kindness! Have a great week. I am so proud of you all.

Love Miss Knox
